AMUSEMENTS.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE .- "Richelieu" was presented last evening and drew a good audience, though not as large as the success of the performance merited. The character of the historical Cardinal of France has been presented so frequently in this city, and by so many leading and Cardinal of France has been presented so frequently in this city, and by so many leading and celebrated actors, that nearly every one that has become familiar with the piece has formed an opinion or selected a favorite style of school of acting. Any new delineation of the role is at once open to criticism, more or less favorable in proportion to the firmness of the belief of the critical in the andience. In essaying this difficult role Mr. George C. Miln labored under many disadvantages, which appeared greater at the beginning of the piece, but which were all successfully surmounted as the play progressed and ultimately turned the tide of opinion strongly in his favor. The difficulty of distinctly hearing, either owing to the faulty acoustic properties of the large auditorium or to a lack of firmness of voice, was unpleasantly prominent at first, but the interest in the gradual development of the latent strength of the actor, so closely absorbed the attention of the audience that nearly every syllable was distinctly audible in the latter part of the presentation. That the efforts of the tragedian were highly appreciated by the audience was made manifest repeatedly by numerons and repeated recalls at the end of the last three acts. To many in the audience the piece presented innumerable delights, and even those disposed to cavil and criticise at first could not but realize, as the curtain dropped on the final triumph of the Cardinal and the overthrow of his enemies, that they had witnessed, taken all in all, a very superior presentation by an actor of great power and ability, all the more remarkable on account of departing from the rigid rules of more familiar presentations of the same role. In the support, Mr. Miln was cleverly sustained, particularly by Miss Adele Payn, who appeared to much more advantage as Julia de Mortimer, the Cardinal's ward, than as Ophelia. Miss Payn improves on acquaintance, and will doubtless gain so rapidly in the esteem of the theatregoing public as to become a prime favorite before Afternoon performances will be given to-day at the Baldwin, Bush and Standard Theatres, with the respective bills of the evening as the attractions. At the Grand Opera House Mr. Miln will repeat "Hamlet." At Woodward's Gardens a grand variety performance will be given in the pavilion.

The list of entertainments for this evening includes "The Private Secretary" at the Baldwin-"Arrah-na-Pogue" is ranning very smoothly and profitably at the Bush—The Minstrels have a good bill at the Standard—George C. Miln and company will produce "Macbeth"—"Prince Methusalem" will be sung at the Tivoli.

THE FISH QUESTION.

How to Obtain Fresh Fish for This Market. In view of the recent fact that a whole family was poisoned recently by eating tainted fish, it would be well for those who are interested in the fish business to make some arrangements by which they can supply the markets of this city with an unfailing quantity and quality of fresh fish. San Francisco contains now nearly 300,000 persons, to which can be added cities connected by rail, making over 400,000 people who should be supplied by our markets with fish. One of the peculiar features of our fresh fisheries is that no improvements have been made inversely during the past thirty years, the Italian boats being the same as were used at the commencement. Sea fishing is done along the Atlantic Coast either by vessels having wells inside of them for keeping fish alive, or by using ice to preserve them while en route to market. The fishing schooners from New York and Boston go hundreds of miles to sea to find the best fishing grounds. Each have on board from fire to eight tons of ice, on which the fish are placed. fire to eight tons of ice, on which the fish are placed as soon as taken. The fish reach port in a frozen state, and are packed again with ice and sent two or three days' travel by rail to Chicago and other inland cities. All that is needed on this coast to overcome the present difficulties in obtaining fresh fish, which under the present arrangement have been caught three or four days before they are exposed in the markets for sale, is a steamer, schooner-rigged, capable of steaming at least ten miles per hour, and carrying from four to six "dories," such as are used by the codfishing vessels which go North. A run of three or four hours would take such a vessel to the fishing ground between Half Moon Bay and the Farallone Islands, and a crew of ten men, under ordinary circumstances, would, in ten hours, catch sufficient fish to make her trip profitable. Some enterprising firm can make a very profitable investment by fitting up a steamer in the style above mentioned.

THE BURNS BABY.

Arrest of the Mother and Grandmother for Murder.

Miss Kate Burns and her mother Johanna were arrested by Officers Dillon and Gillespie yesterday afternoon and booked at the Central Station for the murder of the former's illegitimate child last paturday. The girl had just sufficiently recovered from her trial to bear removal, but was not suffiiently strong to bear being immured in a comfortless cell, consequently she was consigned to the Receiving Hogania, and her mother was allowed to remain with her as nurse. They gave the name of Byrne, but such is known not to be their true appellation. The mother was evidently prepared for arrest, she having secured the services of a San Francisco lady lawyer, but pretended not to know why she was confined. She talks like a person of weak mind, and it is believed that the plan of the defense will be to prove that after Katie gave birth to the child the mother killed it by throwing it into the vault of an outhouse contrary to Katiek wishes. Then the mother killed it by throwing it into the vault of an outhouse contrary to Katie's wishes. Then the mother will be acquitted on the ground of insanity. The girl herself is industriously spreading the report that her mother is insane, and the old woman is supporting her by her actions. Thomas Burns, the girl's brother, who is charged with the child's parentage, is a totally depraved young wretch, who is fully capable of any such incestuous and bestial conduct as his sister charges him with. Before the no fence law went into effect he was a cowboy on the Tulare plains, and afterwards was a cowboy on the Tulare plains, and afterwards was a terror to the peaceable citizens of Visalia, where he was often arrested for misdemeanors and breaches of the peace, being finally sent to San Quentin for two years for a felonious theft. He is supposed to be in that neighborhood now, having disappeared from the city about a week before the child was here. the child was born.

Abandoned at Sea.

Abandoned at Sea.

The ship Matterhora arrived in port yesterday, having on board Captain Davies, first and second officers and nine men of the British bark Clwyd, which was abandoned off Cape Horn on September 4th, the vessel being a complete wreek. The Clwyd sailed from Cardiff for Iquique with a full cargo of railroad material. When off Cape Horn she encountered terrific gales, a tremendons sea taking everything movable from the decks and washing overboard three of the crew. The Clwyd was built at Liverpool in 1877, was an iron vessel of 767 tons, and owned by D. Jones & Co., of Liverpool.

Bismarck's Study.

Bismarck's Study.

Bismarck's study is a very large room, with several mahogany tables, well able to bear the large loads of manuscripts and documents. The windows look toward the south, and close to them stands an enormous writing desk, with an uncomfortable chair that has no back to it. A bronze inkstand, blue sand and paper are the only implements besides a goose quill, the only kind of pen ever used by the Chancellor, who abhors steel pens. In a corner of the window recess, just opposite the Chancellor's seat, stands a bureau, above which hangs the Emperor's portrait. At the other end of the room, where the light from the windows does not well penetrate, stand several couches and arm-chairs, in which Bismarck loves to rest, with a pipe in his mouth and deep thought on his earnest brow. The walls of this sanctum are decorated with the portraits of the Chancellor's only daughter, Countess Rantzau, Princess Bismarck and Counte Herbert and William. In a dark corner stands a small card table which Bismarck brought home from the Franco-German war. On it was signed the peace between Germany and France, February 26, 1871.

KEARNEY'S RESIGNATION.

Policeman's Married Lot That was Short and Unhappy. James McGrath and T. F. Connolly were appointed to the police force yesterday to fill vacan-cies caused by the resignation of Officers P. Coyle and William Kearney, which took effect on the 1st cies caused by the resignation of Officers P. Coyle and William Kearney, which took effect on the 1st iustant, but were not made known until yesterday. Mr. Coyle left the force on account of physical disability, but there is a bit of romance and disaster to fond hopes attached to the quitting of Officer Kearney that is a little out of the ordinary run. Bill Kearney was a good-natured giant, commonly reputed to have a soft heart as big as his body and was a capable officer. Some months ago he was "caught" by a pretty demi-blonde, whom he often saw on his way to and from the North End station, and the time he could spare from clubbing drunks and chasing thieves was devoted to winning his way into her affections. This he successfully accomplished, and two months ago they were married, Kearney having previously spent nearly his entire savings in converting No. 1331 Clay street into a little palace. A plano was among the furnishings, and everything was in keeping. Mrs. Kearney ought to have been a happy woman, and she was; but her happiness seems to have been acquired only while her husband was patrolling his beat. After a month of married life whispers reached Kearney of strange gatherings at his home, of men of doubtful character enjoying his hospitality without his consent and in his absence, and of other indiscreet actions on the part of his wife. The instincts of his profession prevailed and he went on the trail. When his informants were confirmed to his satisfaction, he never said a word, but continued as usual. Late last month he called an auctioneer into the house during his wife's absence, and sold him every stick of furniture, bric-a-bruc, etc., down to the carpets on the floor, for cash in hand, and made the stipulation that everything should be removed between the hours of I and 5 P. M. on the 31st. He gave him a key to the house and on the 31st decoyed his wife into visiting some friends in the Mission. He remained with her all the afternoon, but did not accompany her back to 1331, which, by the time sh it, was a total wreck as far as interior decorations were concerned. Kearney did not return that night or the next day, and on the evening of the 1st he filed his resignation with the Commissioners, and on the 2d instant he took the Eastbound overland train without leaving a word of reproach for his wife. He is now at the home of his brother in New York his brother in New York.

Accused of Assault to Murder.

James A. Brown, a sailor on board the whaling vessel Atlantic, which arrived in this port about ten days ago, was last night at 11 P. M. carousing in the Tropic saloon on Pacific street, between Montgomery and Sansome, with Andrew Kellis, the third mate of the aforesaid vessel. During the bacchanalian festival words ensued between these come of the sea which resulted in Brown's drawing sons of the sea which resulted in Brown's drawing a razor and severing the tip of the left ear of the mate completely off. Officer Reynolds, followed by a number of citizens, lodged the offender in the City Prison, where he was charged with assault to en People Killed and a Number Wounded-Work of Train Wreekers. HEMPSTEAD, Tex., November 14th.—About half-past 1 o'clock this morning, the north-bound train on the Houston and Texas Central Railway was wrecked at Clear Creek station, about two miles wrecked at Clear Creek station, about two miles south of this place, and so far as known, ten people were killed outright and fifteen wounded more or less dangerously. An investigation by the railway authorities reveals the fact that the diabolical work was done by discharged employés and thieves in the vicinity, who sought to wreck a freight train for the spoils contained. Breaking into a section house, the wreckers obtained the necessary tools, and by pulling the spikes and unfastening the fish plates, arranged the rail to yield to the pressure, without, however, entirely removing it. It so happened that the passenger train, having the right of way and being behind time, was the first to reach the scene of the disaster, striking the loosened rail. The engine and tender got over safely, while the two baggage cars, the mail and express, and two Pullman sleepers went over a thirty-foot embankment and into the creek. The following are the killed and wounded: and wounded: KILLED.

FRIGHTFUL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

E. F. Loris, baggage-master; L. Cordoza, traveling passenger agent N. Y., T. and M. Railroad; Lemar Leaks, newsboy; Green Lewis, colored porter; Hamp Thomas, of Navasota, wood contractor, and a German lady and three children. Julia Childress, of Atlanta, Ga., six years old, at first reported as missing, was taken from the water, drowned.

Some enthusiastic gentleman has written a book to show "How to Live on a Shilling a Week," or to put itanother way," "How Not to Live on a Shilling a Week, He tried the experiment on his own unfortunate person, and he also "mooted the subject to my little son, aged 8 years," who "at once entered into it." The theory was put into practice with success. This is how it was done, in case any one wishes to try a slow death or to commit a blameless suicide. For the two shillings he obtained the following:

ı	obtained the following:
1		8.	d. 1	Pounds.
ŧ	Two and a quarter lbs. yellow maize	0	21/2	214

Thus they got 25 pounds weight of food during the week, which gave nearly two pounds weight a day each.

Refinement in Vegetarianism.

A new refinement in vegetarianism has been devised. At a recent "vegetarian banquet," after the usual quantity of distensive food had been consumed, a malcontent had the courage to observe that if we left off rearing animals for food it would interfere with clothes. He was, however, as he deserved to be, instantly confuted in the most practical manner by a true vegetarian, who arose and asserted that he was completely dressed in materials which had involved no blood guiltiness whatever. A cotton velveteen coat, a dark linen mmaterials which had involved no blood guittiness whatever. A cotton velveteen coat, a dark linen drill waistcoat, corduroy trousers and lawn tennis shoes (no doubt with tape laces, but that is not stated), constituted the array of this animals' friend. He also committed himself to the amazing statement that "he had never tasted animal food in his life."

Stealing Mining Machinery.

Colorado papers say a wholesale system of stealing mine machinery is practiced in that State. The owner of one mine at Leadville says he has lost by theft three hoisting plants within the last two years. In almost every instance where operations on a mine have been temporarily suspended, when the owners or their agents visit the property to resume work they find their machinery dismantled, every movable piece missing, and they are fortunate if they find any covering to their plant. Numerous instances can be cited-where entire shaft-houses have been dismantled, every detachable piece removed from the engine, and the wrecked valuable machinery left exposed to the elements. It is a might enterprising man that will steal a steam engine.

Vice-Admiral Close of the British Navy has offered a singular explanation about the loss of the gunboat Wasp recently off the Irish coast. There exists, it seems, a form of defective sight known as "moon blindness," persons afflicted with which are unable to perceive a light shining in darkness. It is easy to see the consequence of this infirmity in the navigating officer of a ship. Admiral Close says he nearly lost the man-of-war Trident once from this cause, only discovering in the nick of time that his navigating officer was anable to see the light of a lighthouse half a mile distant. If "moon-blindness" is an established fact in medical science, the sooner provision for detecting it is made the better.

Poisoned by an ant-eater.

The Fearful Suffering of a Showman in a Dime Museum.

James Howe, aged about fifty, formerly employed at the Seaside aquarium on Coney island, was dying last night in the crysipelas pavilion at Bellevue hospital, says the New York Star of Monday. On September 29th last, while Howe was feeding an animal known as the South American ant-eater at the aquarium, he was scratched on the hand three times by the vicious beast. The wounds were elight, and Howe deemed a dressing of simple plaster sufficient to heal them. The same day Howe came to this city on an open wagon, and failed to protect his hand from the cold atmosphere. The result was that his wounds began to swell, and when he arrived at his home in Mulberry street he was compelled to take to his bed.

He lay for three weeks in his room unattended save by his nineteen-year-old son, who, according to Professor Campbell of the Bowery museum, neglected him shamefully. Howe continued to grow worse and crysipelas having set in he was removed to Bellevue about two weeks ago, where he has steadily weakened. Part of the time he has been out of his mind, but this is attributed to congenital causes and not as an effect of the wound.

The unfortunate man was seen by a Star reporter at the hospital, where he presented a piteous spectacle. He was stretched upon a couch his hands clasped convulsively, breathing stertorously, and his whole appearance indicating every symptom of approaching dissolution. Dr. Stokes, who is in attendance on Howe, gave it as his opinion that the patient could not live through the night. He attributed his gradual sinking to the terrible exhaustion consequent on erysipelas. There was an absence of all symptoms of hydrophobia, and beyond the origin of the wounds there was nothing extraordinary about the case.

The South American ant-eater, through whose claws Howe met his fate, is an animal which closely resembles the raccoon. The ant-eater belongs to the rodent family, is about a foot in length, and has a long tapering ta system, occasionally produces symptoms of hydro-phobia. The ant-eater is confined in a wire cage, and the employes of the museum display consider-able prudence when they are within reach of the animal's claws.

OLD LONDON GUILDS.

The Essential Characteristics of Them the Common Enquere and Purse.

Mr. Hallam describes the old guilds as fraternities by voluntary compact to relieve each other in poverty and to protect each other from injury, and adds: "Two essential characteristics belonged nose by voluntary compact to releve each other in poverty and to protect each other from injury, and adds: "Two essential characteristics belonged to them, the common banquet and the common purse. They had also, in many instances, a religious, sometimes a secret, ceremonial to knit more firmly the bond of fidelity. They readily became connected with the exercise of trades, with the training of apprentices, with the traditional rules of art. From what has just been stated as to the origin of the several companies, says the Nineteenth Century, it is pretty clear that this description by Mr. Hallam of the guilds is applicable to the companies. London was no doubt in those early days agreat manufacturing town, in or near which cloth working, the smelting of iron, the making of arrows and bows, the working of silk and leather, the manufacture of the precious metals and other industries were practiced with much success, and the several trades appear to have had in such early days their recognized quarters in the city, and, owning to their localization, they formed themselves into guilds or companies for mutual protection and as such no doubt they undertook to regulate the trades whose names they bore; they appointed overseers to inspect the wares produced and sold and umpires to adjudicate in cases of dispute between masters and workmen. But it should always be kept in mind that from very early times the several companies consisted largely of noncraftsmen; from time immemorial the privileges of membership have been hereditary, one mode of admission having always been by patrimony, which causes the right to the freedom to descend to all the lineal descendants, and from time immemorial a system of apprenticeship has entered into the constitution of the companies, under which the members, irrespective of whether they were not members of the trades ticeship has entered into the constitution of the companies, under which the members, irrespective of whether they were not members of the trades the names of which were borne by the companies, were privileged to receive apprentices. Thus it came to pass that as early as 1445 of the skinner's company there was only one skinner by trade a member, and that in 1560 of the five persons named as master and wardens of the clothworker's company, only one was a clothworker, and that in still earlier times the governing body contained scarcely any clothworkers.
