MR. SUTRO WAS ANGRY

He Reads Colonel Crocker's Letter.

Rejection of the Company's Proposition.

An Efficient Cable Railroad to the Ocean Beach Is Demanded.

Adolph Sutro was not in a pleasant frame of mind yesterday afternoon. As a rule Mr. Sutro is as calm as the bosom of the ocean beneath his home upon a summer's morning. Yesterday, however, his equanimity was greatly disturbed, and he used vigorous language in expressing his opinions regarding other gentlemen prominent in the city's affairs. The philanthropist had received several letters during the day, the contents of which greatly disturbed him. These letters, which are self-explanatory, were as follows:

shall not have others come in and upset my plans.

"Mr. Crocker suggests that the plan he proposes is a novel method of settling a controversy. Yes, indeed it is, most novel. I never before heard of one so novel. 'The public is also interested,' he says. Oh, ho, so he finds that out, does he? And he speaks for the people! Bah! I see his scheme. He wishes to give the impression that he has forced me into any position which he proposes. He is to dictate terms, hey? He desires the war to end, does he? Well, sir, this battle will go right on. I have already given them some hard knocks, and I will give them some more, right under the ribs. Their business has been injured, I would not care to say how much in money, but it has been injured. They wish now to stem the tide of popular opposition against them. The matter has gone too far; it is now out of my hands. In this letter of his Mr. Crocker begs the question. He does not answer my proposition at all. He says he is willing to give transfers; but we don't want transfers, to be given out as they please. We want a first-class cable line to the beach, traveling at regular intervals of five minutes, and giving the best of facilities. We want suitable stations, also. Why does he not meet my proposition in a manly manner? But I will answer his letter; oh, yes. I will answer it, and then he will know what I mean.

"I will go before the Street Committee to-morrow in relation to the franchise for which I have applied. This letter will not stop my action. Some things cannot now be recalled. The battle will go on."

New Fight Over the People's Bank.

The Proposed Directors Are Beaten.

Meeting of the Depositors—McDonald's Challenge of the Grand Jury.

The quarrel among the contending factions which are striving to secure control of the People's Home Savings Bank reached a crisis yesterday, and from present indications a long and wearisome litigation must intervene before the depositors obtain even a part of their money. There appears to be little doubt that the men selected by the depositors will never enter the bank as directors. There was a stormy scene in the bank yesterday afternoon. Men called one another liars with a calmness which showed they were quite ready to add another argument to the discussion. Members of the depositors' committee were accused of methods which place them in no very creditable position. ...

man's deposit of $100 and it is upon the authority of that he is acting. He and McCarthy have acted together in this committee, but I now see their game and have the proofs to expose it. I do not intend to allow them in this bank and as long as I am here will allow no one who represents Dick McDonald or his friends."

"We want no unnecessary litigation," said Attorney Watt, "but we do want to see the depositors protected. The depositors, who have given Hutton and his associates authority, represent 10 per cent of the entire amount involved. Men who have fully as much at stake have come to me with an emphatic protest against the action of the depositors now in the field. They demand protection, and as far as I am able to give it they shall receive it. Hutton did make the proposition to have me retained as attorney if he could share the legal business of the bank."

As matters stand now it seems as if the receiver has decidedly the best of it. He will not give way, and the depositors have nothing in their power to compel him. Judge Hebbard holds the key to the situation and, until he changes his order, no board can be elected. S. A. McDonnell declares that he never spoke a word in his life to any of the McDonalds, and consequently cannot be charged with a friendliness which would destroy his efficiency as a director.

THEY ARE UNBIASED.

McDonald's Challenge to the Grand Jury Is Disallowed.

R. H. McDonald's challenge to the Grand Jury panel was promptly disallowed by Judge Murphy yesterday. Every member of the jury was examined by McDonald's attorneys. The jurors to a man disavowed having any bias or prejudice against the defendant. On the contrary, they formed no opinion in the case ...

An Accident to Mrs. Simon Newman.

Ridden Down by a Careless Horseman.

Happened in the Park Near the Entrance to the Midwinter Fair.

A dreadful accident occurred on the Park road, in front of the Exposition grounds, near the north gates, at 2:25 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Simon Newman of 1356 Post street was about to enter the Fair with her two children when she was knocked down and badly injured by a horse. Captain Thomson of the Park police saw two young men on horseback racing toward him from the direction of the Casino. He was mounted and on the lookout in front of the gates. He got his riata in hand and told Officer Harper to do likewise and they were ready to lasso the horses when they came to the entrance. Before the two reached the officers the accident happened.

GOOD TEMPLARS' DAY

SESSIONS OF THE TEMPERANCE CONGRESS.

The Evils of Strong Drink, Both Moral and Physical, Discussed.

...

He told of the influences of home, and said that he regarded the home that would not develop a true spiritual life in the children as one of the greatest perils known to the world. The license of drink was like the old pirate who put false lights on the shore. This Nation was guilty of putting false lights on the shore when it licensed the sale of liquor. The Nation was guilty of holding out false lights to the children when it licensed the liquor traffic. Children in their youth should be bound in the influence of truth. The boys and girls should be taught true independence of character and individuality. They should be taught prohibition. If there is brandy in the pie they should not eat it.

Mrs. M. E. Richardson of Oakland spoke of "Children; Their Education." She argued that the father-love and mother-love must go together if the children were to have a true education. Precept and example must go together. The children should be educated.

Robert Thompson spoke of "The Scientific Test of Moral Action."

At the evening session J. M. Walling of Nevada City spoke on the "Saloons vs. State and Nation." He reviewed the history of the ancient nations, and held that their decay and downfall were due to drink. Our nation is in greater danger than those of antiquity, he said, and sturdy blows must be struck at the wine cup.

"The Basis of Brotherhood" was treated by Rev. J. B. Hester of Santa Rosa.

Robert S. Burns of Auburn talked on "Cranks and Their Uses."

To-day the California Woman's Christian Temperance Union will conduct the proceedings of the congress.
