RED CROSS AFFAIRS

Money to Red Cross.

A check for $268.66 was sent by La Fiesta Camp, No. 83, Woodmen of the World, to the Los Angeles chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday as the gross proceeds of a benefit given on June 15. The expenses of the benefit were all paid by La Fiesta Camp.

War Relief Luncheon.

A luncheon for war relief will be given at the rooms of the British Ambulance Society in the Westminster Hotel next Tuesday noon. The hostess will be in charge of Mrs. J. D. Bennet, mother of Enid Bennet, the film star, assisted by Red Cross young women. The programme is being arranged by Mrs. Evelyn Robinson, and will include several musical and vaudeville numbers.

Request is made by the management of the Red Cross Adobe Inn and branch shop for the loan of a small roll top desk and several chairs. The Adobe Inn, which is located at West Jefferson and Figueroa streets, is under the direction of the Jefferson P.-T.A. Red Cross Auxiliary.

This auxiliary has recently received the quota of hospital garments to be supplied and sends out an urgent call for workers for the hospital garment and surgical dressing classes, which meet each Friday at the Jefferson school, at the corner of West Jefferson and Ford. The salvage department of the auxiliary is also in need of the regular loan of an automobile with which to gather salvage.

Hostesses at the Adobe Inn on Wednesday were Mrs. J. S. Towle and Mrs. J. Tucker.

TEA SHOP WORKERS TO TAKE VACATION.

CARNIVAL SCHEDULED FOR NEXT SATURDAY ORDERED POSTPONED.

By Olive Gray.

The morning Saturday was to have been the date for Hale's store to give a carnival at the Red Cross Shop, Eighth and Alvarado streets, but the plans have been changed. The date being the first Saturday during the summer which has not witnessed some brilliant affair given by the retail stores, the announcement is made thus in advance, lest others be attracted to the anticipation of spending an interesting afternoon and evening.

So strenuous has been the work on the entertainment at the Red Cross Shops during the summer that it has been decided to take a complete week-end vacation, from Friday night until Monday morning, at which time the shops will be closed. The following Saturday, however, will be Jaunty day at the Red Cross shops, and a wealth of entertainment is in preparation for that time.

A Canadian Hall of Fame.

The plans for the commemoration of the Canadian Parliament building to contain a hall of fame for commemorating the glorious deeds of Canadians in the Allied war, and also for the accommodation of the ashes of the Canadian dominion statesmen. The hall of fame will be practically a Canadian Westminster Abbey, and will run almost the whole length of the building. There will be niches in the spandrels of the floor for the insertion of statues, and a walling will be in course for the portrayal of scenes associated with the events for which the Allied nations are fighting.

THE LETTERS OF LEMUEL BEAN.

Gardenettes and Farmerinos.

BY ROY R. MOULTON,
SOMEWHERE IN NEW YORK, Aug. 4.

Dear Pulter:

In the section of New York in which we live there is, now and then, on the face of the landscape a small bare spot of ground. Of course it is worth $100 an inch, but, on account of the building operations are restricted, and so these little patches of Old Ma Earth remain vacant.

These little patches of ground have given rise to the gardenette, a beautiful variety of the feminine gender. The people who own the ground rent it out for garden purposes. One may get a very beautiful young farm 15 x 15 feet in size at a very reasonable figure.

I suppose, out in the country, the farmerettes are the real thing, but the main thing in gardenetting is to keep in uniform. The gardenette we have hellell, believe me, would drive the Kaiser crazy if she could, and so army in the world has anything on the French army for uniform and bulge.

Gardenettes select their own uniforms. There is no general rule to go by—serving stripes, sherrons and the like are optional. The length of length of service, and a gardenette who has been in the game for two hours is allowed to gamboge all over herself if she has the figure. It seems a shame to do gardening in such a costume and so some of the gardenettes think, apparently. In some cases the gardenette uniforms would look better as bathing suits during bathing suits seen at Long Beach. The bathing suits never approach the water than the dark line of wet sand, and nobody can tell whether the gardenette uniforms never get nearer the garden than the board pathway.

When the gardenettes want to do real gardening they take off a part of their gardenette uniforms, and get into old clothes. Most of the real gardenettes I have seen in the boarding-houses.

My wife, Loella, has been working as a gardenette uniform which, it is hoped, will combine anything in this section of the suit.

RUTH BRESCHES FIRST.

The first article we purchased was a pair of corduroy riding breeches, very smart. Then leather puttees. The next article was a French beret or tam, I don't know which. Several French artists we have seen in the movies. A Tab-o'-Shanter has completed the outfit. One cannot tell whether she is going to paint an Italian sunset or take a ride along the bridle path in Central Park; but it seems that is the uniform which has been adopted by the gardenettes of Elmhurst, in which section we live.

The riding portion of the uniform suggests that the gardenettes expect to pursue the romping beans over the hurdles while the remainder gives an artistic effect and is a gentle tribute to our ally, France.

The ladies have been so busy getting their uniforms ready that the gardens have languished in spots and the potato bugs and tomato worms seem to be having a field day.

Over in Woodside, the section next to ours, the ladies have adopted a uniform consisting of Palm Beach overalls, red riding coats, aviators' caps and high-heeled slippers.

IT'S A DELICATE TASK.

Raising a garden in a city like this is a delicate task. If one could take the garden indoors at night and keep it under lock and key all would be well. But it is very dangerous to leave anything like a garden lying around loose out of doors after dark. We have a cosmopolitan population and there are many people who just don't see letting us work and make garden so that they may come along and help us reap the harvest.

If a person forgets and leaves a baby cab out of doors over night it is entirely useless to go down and look for it in the morning. The best thing to do is to open the morning papers to the baby cab advertisements and start out bright and early to buy another cab. No use looking for the old one. It is much the same with Fords.

They say steal an American flag if it is hanging out of a first floor window and if it is hanging out of a tenth floor window the result is the same, there is a fine stage on the front of the building. It isn't even safe to leave a half-dozen bottles of milk on the front step of milk is about as safe in a dumb waiter as a dish of ice cream in the region where all Huns go when they die.

So it is easy to imagine what happens to a garden which has out of doors with the price of vegetables where it is now. The pitiers have even been known to leave sarcastic notes complaining that the gardeners didn't plant enough potatoes.

Gardening, therefore, becomes largely a matter of uniform. The uniform is a success even if the garden is not. Nobody will steal the uniform, no matter how badly they may be in need of clothing.

HAVE SOME TROUBLE.

The ladies in various occupations have seem to be in rare trouble over their uniforms anyway. This is most noticeable among the conductorettes and ladies of the subway and trains. It has been suggested several times that these hard-working ladies get together on the subject of uniform, but they just don't seem to be able to do it. It is asking at all to see the ladies shopping tickets at a subway booth as advised as a field marshal of the Mesopotamian army and neither is the lady who takes the passenger of inquiring mind would know whether she would be likely to be being shoved by a Vassar graduate or a Wm. H. P. DuBose Yale Brook Hunt Club; but he is left in delightful state of uncertainty. Many of these wavy dazzlers are also going to be those who are going to be those who come to conductorette has been mistaken for a hostess at an afternoon tea. It is to be feared, for conductorettes to dress home like the passengers, but many of them do.

There can be no doubt that the uniform is the thing. Fifth avenue on a pleasant afternoon is a show of them. One may see a gallant French officer of whiskered age and he desires. The Frenchmen are a very fine looking people and no wonder their fight well. They have the right idea. Dress to the limit in their dress uniforms.

When one is in doubt whether the man approaching is a Rumanian or a Montenegrin, a Serbian or a Greek in court attire, it is generally safe to assume that both grades are the same. The party is not so apt to be a carriage thief because he is in uniform. The hotel proprietors here are showing the visiting Europeans more aoorf uniforms than they ever knew before. The uniform of an ordinary porter at the Ormonde Hotel including gold braid and shoulder ornaments, would be the envy of the neighborhood of thirty-eight friends.

The ladies who drive automobiles are gradually getting together in

PASSING OF A NOTED LANDMARK.

Will San Francisco's famous Cliff House become a House of a Thousand Ghosts, or will it experience a renaissance and again take its peculiar place in the Bohemian life of the community, is a question patron of the world-famous resort are asking today.

Last night the lights went out, and there appears to be something in the hearts of its devotees akin to genuine sorrow.

Manager John Farley will not speak of it. "All the old-timers are too sad to talk," he said. "Don't ask me to say anything, for so far as I know, the last chapter of its famous history is ended. The fame of the Cliff House evokes more memories than any other American landmark, not excepting the old Absinthe House of New Orleans."

Does the rendezvous of the seekers of conviviality belong to an era that is gone? Does the order reigning in the pitchpay of selling liquors to its guests effectually obliterate it except as a memory, and will bats take refuge there and weird, haunting sounds make of it a place to shun? Or will it some to life again and attain popularity undreamed of before when some manager conceives a form of entertainment that does not appear to require for its acceptance the stimulus that now is found in one of these round bowls?

It is impossible to resist an offer. Everybody has a uniform now except the poor old ult consumer, the family man, who is doing his share toward bearing the brunt of this war.

Hoping you are the same, I remain,

Yours, LEM.

QUEST OF A SHIRT SERIOUS IN RUSSIA.

FIRST FIND IT; THEN IF YOURE LUCKY YOU MAY BE PERMITTED TO BUY IT.

[A P Russian CORRESPONDENCE]

PETROGRAD, July 5.—The Bolshevist hedging in existence of those who live in Petrograd during these times of distorted regime and shortage in necessities of life seemed to all their details to the ordinarily simple task of buying a shirt. To accomplish this takes time, patience and determination.

First, one must find the shirt. One may visit forty shops before he finds one of the proper size. The question of preference of style is not to be considered for one moment. Otherwise, one will never get the shirt. Having found something that resembles a shirt of the proper size, one deposits a small payment to hold it.

The next thing is to convince one's house committee—there is a commune in every apartment-house in Petrograd now—that he needs a shirt. If the house committee passes favorably on the subject it so reports to the precinct or district "soviet" of commune. This in turn reports to the commissary in charge of the distribution of shirts and kindred articles of clothing.

If one is quite lucky, after five or six days' time, he receives a duly signed and sealed permit to buy a shirt. Then he buys it, but ordinarily pays the Russian equivalent of $15 or $20. Some of the poorest quality may be found as far as the Russian equivalent of $9.

This restriction of purchase extends to all major articles of men's and women's clothing and shoes, and recently, because of the linen and cotton cloth shortage, was applied to handkerchiefs. Prices for everything are in proportion to the shirts. An ordinary suit of men's clothing costing the equivalent of $140.
