

Brundage Donation Dispute Court No to Tax Relief

A contribution of nearly $500,000 to the M. H. de Young Museum is the crux of a dispute between Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, and the U.S. Tax Court.

The court held today that the contribution, along with several others by Brundage, is not deductible.

It ruled the noted athlete owes $45,000 on his 1962 income taxes.

Brundage filed suit against the Internal Revenue Service, claiming the donations were made to organizations supported largely by the government or by private donations.

This entire line is an additional 10 percent above the normal maximum for charitable contributions which is set at 20 percent of total income.

The de Young gift of $250,000 was to finance expansion of the museum, agreement to house the fabulous collection of Oriental art Brundage donated earlier.

Dirksen Now An Actor, Too

Owner to Run Cliff House

Foster Lunch System will operate the Cliff House restaurant April 15 when its franchise expires. The restaurant, however, will remain open with George S. Whitney Jr., the owner of the historic property, assuming the management.

The decision of Foster's, which has operated the restaurant for 15 years, not to renew its franchise contract will be asked to approve City Planning Commission.

The City wants to purchase the property, along with the adjacent former Sutter Building, for use as a public use area. Foster's has agreed to sell the property to the City Planning Commission.

Inefficiency in Britain

LONDON — (AP) — One American worker has a productivity rate greater than that of two British workers, a British journal says.

The monthly magazine "New Technology" said one reason for this is the failure of British firms to utilize their resources as well as their American counterparts.

Principal Attends Meeting

Mrs. Phoebe Ward Brundage, principal of Galileo Adult School, is in Paris reviewing the United States on an UNESCO international advisory committee on vocational education.

The committee, composed of 28 people, each from a different country, began work Monday to discuss adult education, literacy and youth movements.
